F16 HAVEN, LANCING – Doors to balcony

Good morning Dawn, further to my earlier subject email I have recovered the second part of my submission in favour of subject request for planning to be granted.

It would be a shame if the Haven is to be stuck in the Twentieth Century and not permitted to embrace new technology which offers a very much better access solution than plain sliding doors.
They may not be the same visually as others, ie three pane, rather than two pane. As the doors are set back & at a high level it would be interesting to know who, in passing, might either notice or object. Unless a passer by is looking for detailed differences they, or anyone passing, is unlikely to notice the difference.

The doors at F16 certainly don't detract from the overall appearance & balance of the building as they are contained within the original size of the structural apertures which give the building its statement of architectural consistency. F25 do not object.

Clearly, the leaseholder of F16 didn't neglect to request permission deliberately but perhaps did so out of ignorance or circumstance so might be forgiven and granted permission for the new doors? Thank you.

JR

I had no recollection of the mail in question having been sent, so your find is a great relief - to see and recognise the communication - so that fears of submissions by others on my behalf can be eliminated. It was sent 7th March, but acknowledged only on 17th March which delay contributed to it not being recalled.
