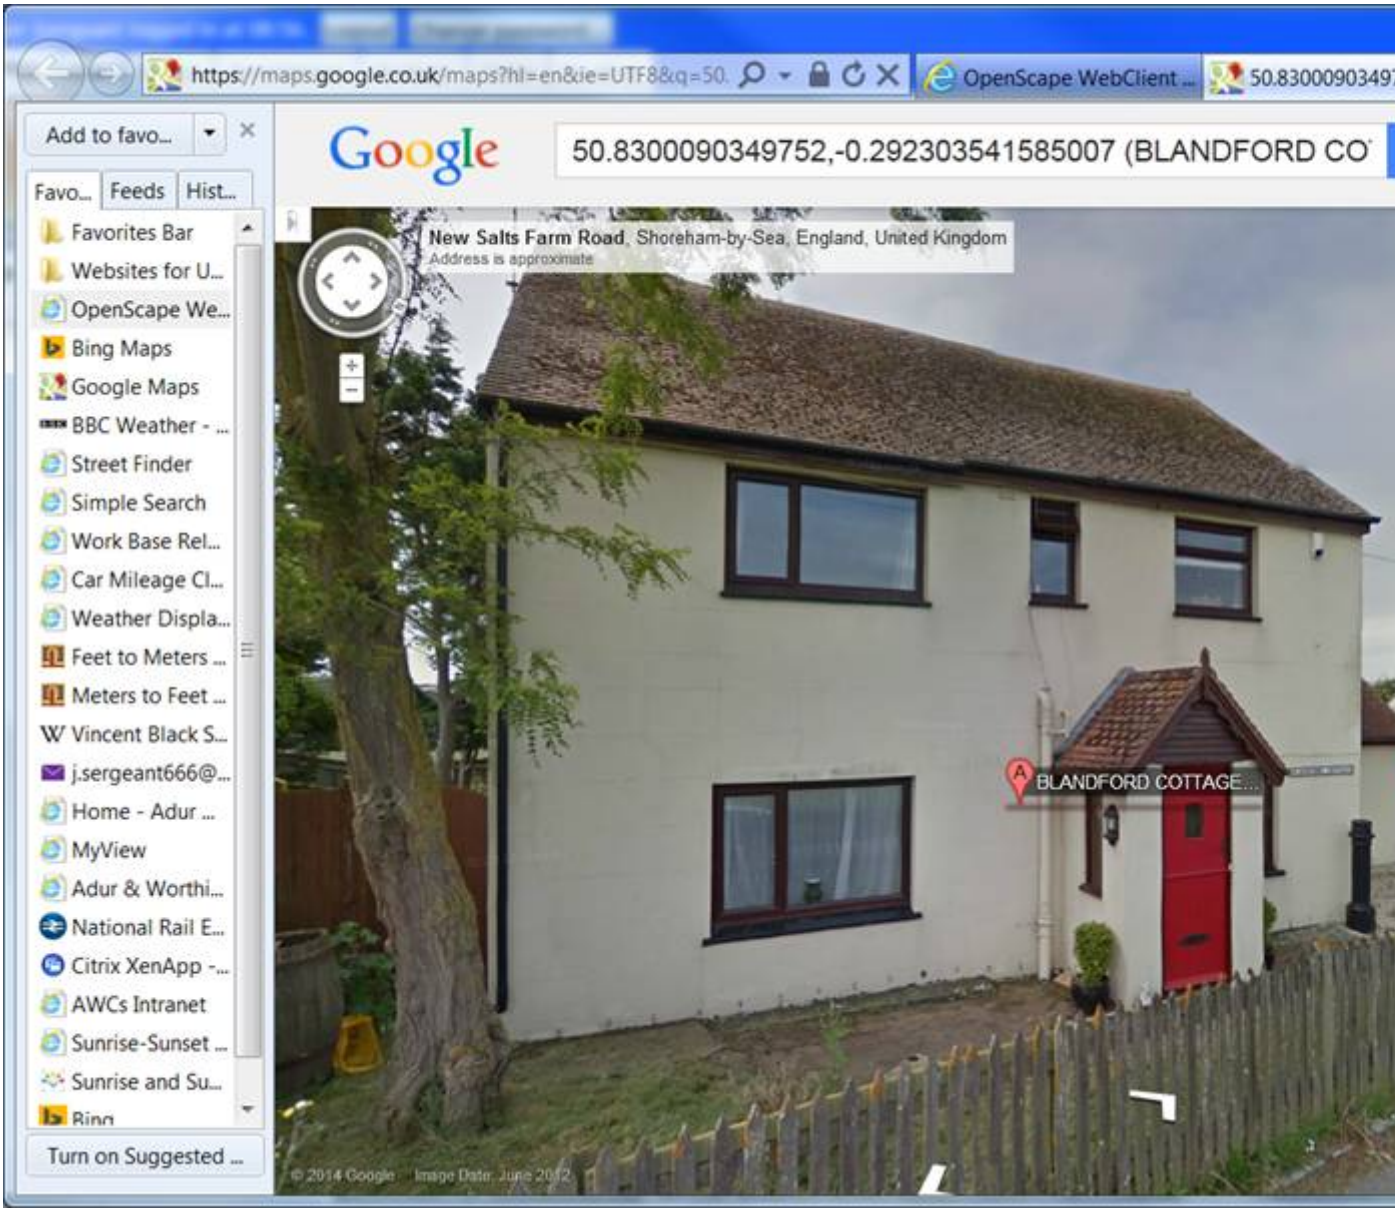
Thank you for your e-mail I have taken a look at the plans and street view of this application and I am not sure that the existing trees are shown on the plan as close as they really are/ will be.



If, what appears to be an Ash tree is to be retained it will be very close and directly in front of the proposed extension. Although this maybe possible as there is existing hard standing and new foundations can be designed to take into account the close proximity of the tree, I feel that future pressure will affect the trees retention. Particularly as it appears to have a low wide crown, leaving few options when considering light and overhang.

Many thanks
