Comments: This is absolutely unbelievable. How can you even accept this as an application? It appears to be a blatant attempt to say we are the big bullying corporation and cannot stand that we have been forced to bow to the little people out there that don't mean a jot to us. After months of campaigns, petitions of over a 1000 people and meetings with Tim Loughton and Mike Mendoza, Basepoint put in a retrospective planning application to add @ropetackle on the front elevation, as well as triplicating this on the other 2 elevations where they hadn't been advertised before. This was after, with NO PLANNING APPLICATION whatsoever, they changed ROPETACKLE to BASEPOINT in the dead of night! How on earth being advertised 3 times more than they have before, can they be petty, smallminded and boorish enough to have @ropetackle removed from the new 2 advertised elevations?
