I fully approve of the painting of the blades of the wind turbines. I have seen, and heard the harrowing sound of too many birds getting hit by the blades, and have felt sickened to see their lifeless bodies crash to the ground. Anything, such as painting the blades, that can help stop this senseless loss of life, is a far to good of an opportunity to miss. With the Shoreham Port, priding itself on it's environmental status, it would be yet another wonderful way of showing its commitment to protecting its wildlife and bird neighbours.
