Hi,

The concerns that I primarily have are that I have structual issues on my side of the property adjoining the proposed dormer extension. I did have a brick specialist around a couple of years ago but they could do no further repair work without the guidance of a structual engineer. There are large cracks in the structure of the building on my side, and I am worried that the extra weight of the dormer next door will further exacerbated this. Would it be possible to make an appointment to have someone to have a look?

I am also a little concerned about the issue of the lack of light issues that the build will incur, but I guess unfortunatelythis is all par for the course.

Kind Regards Lynne Gurmin
