Dear Rebekah,

Having consulted the related documents on the Adur-Worthing planning portal and checked the West Sussex HER there are no archaeological implications arising from this proposal. There is the recorded site of a former World War II anti-aircraft battery in the vicinity but the exact location is not clear. The application address is within the Kingston Buci Conservation area with the grade I listed church of St Julian at its centre but there does not appear to be direct inter-visibility between the church and the application address therefor the proposals should not have an impact upon its setting.

Regards, Mark
