To Mr PBarnett---I wish to make an objection to plans for balcony on rear extension and also swimming pool with glass roof -firstly pool with glass roof -why is that needed? Surely a fully enclosed roof would be much more appropriate ? Even if opace glass was used (which was supposed to be used in eaves of house -but obviously hasn't been)I live in adjoining house (56) the road is made up of mostly little semi detached homes with shared driveways with a few detached homes on other side of road -so although all the ever changing plans put in for 54Hillrise avenue are very beautiful -i do feel they are not in keeping at all with the area - maybe more fitting for a detached property with land surrounding all sides-- shoreham/ferring /Goring propertys-? As for the balcony -its will totally invade my privacy on my little patio -take out any remaining natural light as we are built on a hill the extension is alot higher as it is -Mr M Steele has not been from the get go a considerate builder - 17months of not being able to have family friends dogs in my garden due to excavation and distraction of footings to my boundary wall fence -leaving builders to work late into evening whilst he went home to his parents -my front boundary wall split bricks badly whilst pulling down his front wall so I'm very wary for obvious reasons to let Mr Steele continue building a home where he has absolute NO consideration for his neighbours -we are so sandwiched together it's paramount we need to think of others around us to maintain a good community yours sincerely Juli greenfield x
