Comments: I am totally shocked that this plan has been built in contravention of the approval in that it is in breach of statutory planning regulations concerning design and materials - given that this is in a conservation area. The statutory requirement specifies such things as appropriate and sympathetic materials within a historic part of Shoreham.

In fact, the structure that has been erected is supremely ugly and easily visible from Church Street, Middle Street and adjacent gardens.

I strongly oppose this retrospective application for the above reasons - both the nature and appearance of the 'plant' and what seems to be a rather unethical aspect of the planning process.
