Comments: A 5 meter extension on a bungalow of this size is extremely excessive. 5 meters in a 8ish meter garden is not viable. This will take up more than 2 thirds of the garden. I am unsure of the reason is it to make the property seem impressive for an onward sale but to cause such extreme detriment to your neighbours is unreasonable. The size will impact all gardens, 106 itself will make drainage harder as extra concrete will not help this. Neighbours either side will have the properties and gardens engulfed by the unnecessary and extreme size of this extension, the 6ft fences already blocks a third of the sun, 5 meters out and higher than 6ft will dwarf at least 2 thirds in darkness and all that can be seen will be brick, nothing will grow as the sunlight cannot reach it and clothes cannot be dried outside at all, the grass will always be wet. I am surprised that this is even being considered quite honestly. Do people come and look first to see if it's suitable or just utterly ridiculous in this case. These properties are not built for this extension type, it is not suitable due to size and design and aesthetic of the road. To be clear, this will block all the sun from neighbouring properties, cause drainage issues and costs to neighbours. This should not be considered at all.
