Comments: Whilst I have no problem with an extension being built, I do feel that 6m from rear wall is rather extensive. I myself have an extension of 4m, hence another 2m past my extension will have considerable impact on the morning light (completely blocking this out) and as I myself just spent a considerable amount of money having my extension refurbished with walls knocked down to make it lighter, this will greatly impact on light into kitchen/dining room, also I feel looking at a brick wall will be highly undesirable.

I am also extremely amazed that the planning drawing of the two properties is totally misleading, as being a semi detached house, both rear walls are exactly the same, not as shown on the drawing with mine being further forward.

The extra 2m will be totally intrusive to look at. As previously mentioned no problem with an extension of 4m.

I would be happy if anyone wishes to view my property to assist with this decision and to see my perceptive to this extra 2m.
