Dear Sir/Madam

I am writing to express my concerns relating to 110 Old Fort Road. Initially I was happy enough for the house to be " converted" when I thought it would be residential only.
However, I have now found out that change of use has been agreed to " business use" This apparently was back dated to August which brings into question that when the planning was submitted to yourselves, was this as residential or business use? if residential use, then this would be at odds with regards the Business Rates being levied from August.

Therefore, I can only presume that the planning permission sought, plus the additional changes thereto, all now pertain to the property being used as a Business.
As we have suffered from loud parties for the majority of the night on many occasions and definitely through the weekends, I assume that the planning permission will now allow this Owner to pursue their business but on a larger scale. Naturally I would ask you to bear this in mind, not only with their amended plans but surely with their planning permission which has been granted.

Many thanks
